BACKGROUND SUMMARY

Historically, foster care dates back to the late 1870s, when it was considered to be an act of humanity and prudence. To guard against the pure mercenary who might attempt to become a foster parent, reimbursement of costs was always kept at a minimum. For years it was believed that foster parents were being well paid. At no time has payment covered all the costs. As costs of caring for children increase, as women move into the labor market, and as the number of single parents increases, the pool of people willing to be traditional foster parents results in a shortage of foster families. Many needy children do not have a foster family.

Foster families receive insufficient funds to take care of the simple needs of the children. Many of the foster children come from homes where mothers have abused drugs and the babies need special care or have other problems. The cost of child care is not provided for foster families, and a baby sitter must be a “licensed” baby sitter which represents an added cost to foster families. Last year, the Foster Families Association requested a 25% increase in payment. The Legislature agreed to a 6% increase.

During the past legislative session, several bills which would have made recruiting foster homes easier were vetoed by the Governor or failed passage in the Legislature.

AB 1820 (Honda) Foster Children: Child Care–would have reimbursed foster parents working outside the home for the cost of licensed child care. In addition, child care costs would have covered foster parents participating in required foster parent training, or fulfilling necessary foster care-related administrative duties.

AB 2043 (Goldsmith) Foster Care: Provider Reimbursement–would have increased the reimbursement rate by 19% effective January 1, 1999.

At the present time, foster children upon reaching the age of 18 must leave the foster care system with no support from state or county. Many are unprepared for independent living and may need skills to survive “on their own.” The Youth Connection group is looking for legislators to sponsor three bills:

1) to provide a stipend for higher education;
2) to extend MediCal to age 22; and
3) to extend foster care until age 21.

The California State PTA is concerned for the well-being of all children and youth. Support for foster families can help ensure that all children will have the opportunity to grow up in a caring family environment.
